THE GREAT SENTRY.

When on a dreary, stormy night The pale iuoon sheds a titfull light That half reveals the distant grounds, The loyal sentry, on his rounds. Is gield to look aloft and flud The cold flag streaming in the wind-The clear-general fleg-o'er land and sea The thenner of the brave and free.

While patriot ardor fills his breast He is relieved and goes to rest; Another seatry takes his place And while he treads with measured pace. He, to b, may look aloft and find The oh I day streaming in the wind-The sia p-germmed Bag-o'er land and sea The bet mer of the brave and free.

So. SCO TT, thou hero of three wars. Deleader of the stripes and stars, When vic tory is thine again, Ere death subduce the mighty brain, The NATION will look up and find Its flag still etreaming in the wind-The star-gen uned they-o'er land and sea The bauner of the brave and free, National Intelligencer,

DISCOVERIES AT POMPEH.

Naples, Oct. 18, 1862. Another most important discovery in Pompeii. It was made last Saturday, during one of those interesting exeavations which are now continually taking exervations which are now continually taking place, arid not far from the bakehouse which was recently brought to light. There were few was recently brought to light. There were few persons present, for the age of toulyism and flunkeyigm has passed, and special, seem, for the most part, to have been merged in the dair the most part, to have been merged in the dair the most part, to have been merged in the dair was ablied and their friends may be present. The directors and some men were working away in a could approximately the properties of the city free of charge.

The directors and some men were working away in a could approximately the properties of the city free of charge. directors and some men were working away in a small, apparently poor house, when their voices indicated that a great discovery and been under, and the three or four visitors who happened to be near were immediately invited to the spot. In a small inner room, employees and laborers are on their knees, working with the utinest care, as if the finest percelain were being handled. On the apper sufface of the ashies, which as yet have not been removed from the neighborhood. us, which as yet have not been removed from Pipes. the neighborhood, are standing boys, girls and men, with their baskets in their hands, all labour suspended, whilst they are looking down on the curious scene below:

The scene was, in truth, very picturesque:
and I wonder that such a subject has never been seized by an artist. But what is it that has been found! In an extreme corner of this nner room have been discovered some human bones,—a rare thing in Pompeii, where most of the population had time to escape; Further rewith what extreme care and delicacy they were conducted—revealed yet others, until the skeletons of five persons were visible, four women and an infant, all crouched up in a corner. The sex and age of the victims, and the very The sex and age of the victims, and the very found, are suggestive of incidents and sufferings which would promise materials for an affecting tole. The arms seem to have been classed as if all hope had been shapdored, and they had come there to die, abandored, and they had come there to die, above the control of course of course of course parts. VESTS, for dress wear, now of course parts. whilst the legs were doubled up in agony of their sufferings. The mouth of one skeleton was open, distended, and hard must have been the last expiring efforts of that poor person The infant was in the extreme corner, where a mother's love perhaps had placed it, in the hope of its there finding greater protection from the and then penetrating into the most secret recesses of every building. Poor, helpless women I they bern abandoned by husband, father, brotherby every male friend. There were bronze armlets or bracelets round their fleshless bones ; and by the side of them lay what were evidently the remains of a purse, in which had been inclosed twenty silver Roman coins and two copper coine. Of course the material of the purse w imperfect, and was reduced to more tinder; still the tecture was perceptible, and this it was which contained the buried gleanings of theun-There were considerable trace, of cloth, too, u the sules, all around the bedies cut. 26 Pauline or skeletons: that is to say, on the ashes there were impressions as of cloth which had been laid over them and then exposed to fire. The pro-bability appeared to be that they were the clothes of the wretched fugitives for there were impressions as it were of folds. Though great care was exercised in removing every stone and mass of ash, I consider the plan adopted to have been wrong and injurious to the general effect. Thus instead of clearing off everything horizontally from right to loft, I would have removed all the ashes on the surface and have exposed to riew the entire mass of bones as they reposed after the last agony was over, Another advantage of this mode is that it would have been asier to discover the nature and the form of the surface on which thay lay, though it was decided that it was a bed-It was at about the distance of 2 1-2feet above the level of the ground that the bones were found and by culting away the mass of ashes the outlines of the bud, or whatever it was, could be clearly discovered Indeed the holes in the ground where stood the legs were discernible. Round what might have been the joints, were still remaining bits of iron; and an the upper surface and upwards there were signs as it were of something similar to columes. Of course, on the moment it was impossible to decide what precisely the article of furniture was, which now was pulverized, and a little discussion took place as to whether it had been a table or a bed; but opinion inclined to the latter supposition and so let it be: but if so, what a hed, and what a night of eternal remose it was which closed around them under repose it was which closed around their and ashes of Vesuvius! I have told you all, perhaps, that is of interest regarding this important and singular discovery: it is of rare occurrence to find human bones in Pampeil, and the form and position in which these lay in themselves tell a story. A romance—a tragedy has been brought to light: and I leave it to an abler pen than my own to dovelope all its

The Grenada, (Miss.,) Appeal seems despergte, and hange all its boyes upon a successful North-west against New England, and thus detack them from their interest in preserving the Union-a forforn hope we think. Our interestence too plainly identified with the Union and the preservation of the navigation of the Mississippi, for such a scheme to meet anything but a sad disappointment. Such is the

Then, where is the danger? The rebels some little service, though the means were lamble, must eventually yield. The danger, the real danger lies in a dismited Notthern sentiment. This does us quite as much good as though we had have been the recipient. We can imagine, yea, any form, and under whatever specious pretext are imiters, and they should be treated as such inny, they should be made banacities, and the hand of every honest, layal man be forever against them. The danger lies, now, in the direction of handed demogages, who seek to misguide the people by false lights and lying lener—men and exceeding plant. It contains its usual amount of the people by false lights and lying lener—men appeals to Chambers of Continuers will be seep through them their commerce will be swept from the seas. The ruling and influential classes in England have here the recipient. We can imagine, yea, no desire to see such depredations atopped. Any number of vessels can be bought or built here, for which Messer Messon & Co. can find money or its equivalent. Nor do I see how the English for-erament could entirely prevent such trunsactions, if men will only tell the needful falsehoods to cover them. All this plusiness may be atopped, and was exceeding glad. We will then will only tell the needful falsehoods to cover them. All this plusiness may be atopped, and was exceeding glad. REBEL EARTHWORKS.

About dusk this evening the enemy commence throwing up new carthworks to the left of Fredericksburg. From five to eight hundred men could be distinctly seen from our signal station busily employed upon them. To-mowow morning A Valuable Residence For Sale will reveal another line of formidable intrench nents. During the past week their old line of works have apparently been abandoned for another about one thousand yards in the rear. They have now altogether about 25 redoubts, also works and ritte pits communding every road leading out of Fredericksburg.

THE MESSAGE

NEW YORK 2d.

The Horald says that the slavery question is the great topic of the message. Mr. Thresh appears to have made all other subjects to the smallest possible dimensions in order to have, "ample scope and verge enough" for his claborate argument in support of the new compromise which he proposes for the slavery question. Mr. Lincoln's views upon this subject cannot full to convince the reader that he is actuated by the most patriotic humane, just and generous considerations but we fear that the abolition radicals of Congress will treat his proposition and his pleading, with indifference if not with scorn and contempt.

The Tribune says: Mr. Lincoln's Message dis In orribane says: Mr. Lincoln's Message dis-cuesos many topics of gravo interest and embodies many important suggestions but the interest of one-subject therein canvassed, overeides all others and his expose will be bailed with approval or spurned with excerntion as the pleader substantiar-ly agrees with ordissents from his judgement on this point. Essenti ally the President prachains-that slavery basheeoms the implaneble for of the American Puion and that the slave power must dia in order that the Republic may live. Heartily agreeing with him on the male mestion we obtain American Fulon and that the slave power must dia in order that the Republic may live. Heartily agreeding with him on the main question we differ on the subordinate point without re-erve and without feeling. We know that he believes gradualism with negre exportation calculated to command emancipation to the South. We believe on the arbor hand that our country has no liborers to export and that the plantess of the South cannot soon find laborers so easily paid and so docide as those to whom they are adensioned. But so long as the great end is kept stradily in rice we can gave almost end incidental gradualism compensation, and exportation, and if these tules mouse the whole let him have them.

FROM THE N. Y. WORLD.

N. Y. 22. The World's editorial draws a comparative an The World's official draws in comparative an-ingly between the President's Emmeipation Proc-lumation and his message. It says the proclama-tion looks to sudden emancipation, while the mes-sage declares that sudden omandipation is on all accounts undesirable, and would be especially im-popular in the slave regions, and a great cell to its immediate recipionts. The proclamation treats slavery as if it were an unmitigated crime. The messages recompless share as transports. TESTIMONIALS,

"I regard Mr. Eddy se one of the most capable and uccessful practitioners with whom I have had official attercourse. CHARLES MASON Commissioner of Petents I have no hesitation in usuaring inventors that his summet employ a nerson more competent and keletror toy, and more capable of putting their applications has form to scene for them, an early and knowled consideration of the Patent Office.

EDMOND BUIKE,

Late Commissioner of Fatents.

Mr. B. B. Eddy has made for the THITTEN spall callings on all but one of which patents have being granted, and that is now peofing. Such unablabable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads not recommend all inventors to apply to his to proceed their patents as tays may be some of having the next failthful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges." JOHN MAHAPTT.

During eight months the enterriber, in contact of Malaren practice, made on total rejected applications $1.5 TEEN APPEALS, EVERY ONE of which was decided in the faces, by the Commissioner of Patents.
